Munro Eager To Get Back With Canucks

TORONTO, Aug. 31.—(CP)—

Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent who told the world the story of the Dieppe raid, came home last night, "glad to be here" and anxious to get back with the Canadian troops "in case something pops."

Munro arrived in Toronto after a record-breaking flight from Britain to New York and thence to Toronto. He was greeted at the airport by his mother and his sister, Betty, whom he hadn't seen in two years after a hurriedly telephoned goodbye from Ottawa.

His sister met his main request—25-cent cigar, "a big one." He telephoned for it from New York.

The lights of Toronto as he flew from New York were "the best sights I've seen," he said. "I would almost sooner see the lights of Toronto than I would Berlin—and that's saying something."

"I came back in one piece and it's just a funny miracle that I didn't get a hole in me," that's all.

The Stoughton car is said by police to have been rammed directly in the centre.

Stoughton complained of a sore back and sore legs after the collision.

J. Plenderleith, who address was not given in the police report, suffered an abrasion on the right arm when thrown from the seat of car in which he was a passenger that was in a collision with another car at 100 street and Jasper avenue at 11:45 p.m. Saturday. ## Lauds Troops From Canada At Hong Kong

Whole-hearted tribute to the valor and unselfish devotion to duty of the Canadian troops who fought and died at Hong Kong was paid here Saturday by Capt. W. H. Thomas, Vancouver-born, captain of a United States steamship line at Hong Kong.

He passed through on his way to the Pacific coast on board the Canadian National Railways Transcontinental, which arrived at 6:30 a.m. The tribute to the defenders of Hong Kong, the Winnipeg Grenadiers and the Quebec Royal Rifles, was sincere and heartfelt.

Capt. Thomas was held as a prisoner for five months by the Japanese in Stanley camp, and landed this week at New York on the liner Grimsoph, passing through here on his way to his home in San Francisco.

The Canadian troops at Hong Kong did their best and with enough fighter planes and more troops Hong Kong could have been held, Capt. Thomas said. In his opinion the surrender was due to lack of three things: airplanes, water and lights. He stated that he had never heard any complaints about the equipment of the Canadian troops.

LOST WEIGHT

He personally had not been badly treated by the Japanese. Capt. Thomas said, though he had lost 45 pounds while a prisoner. Overcrowding and starvation were the worst features of the prison at Stanley camp, which is situated on an island. Military camps where Canadian soldiers are confined are on the mainland, he said.

Rations in the civilian camp were two meals a day, consisting of one quarter of a pound of boiled rice, one spoonful of gravy and one of vegetables. Occasionally prisoners were allowed to buy canned goods from the canteen.

21 Chinese Towns Inundated by Worst Flood in 100 Years

CHUNGKING, Aug. 31.—(AP)—

The first flood in 100 years in Anhwei province was reported yesterday to have inundated 21 towns. Chinese press dispatches said the Wei river had overflowed and in one district 3,000 houses collapsed.

These reports said the flood also affected a good part of the Japanese occupied sector of north Anhwei, causing interruption of traffic on the Tientsin-Pukow railway.

Army Rejections Now 30 Per Cent. In Ottawa Area

OTTAWA, Aug. 31.—(CP)—Thirty per cent of men in the Ottawa district applying for service in the Canadian army are rejected as medically unfit, Col. A. T. Shillington, senior medical officer of the Ottawa area command, said here Saturday.

Col. Shillington said that although the army has relaxed considerably during the past year, had eyesight is still a major cause of rejection. Category C applicants are accepted into the army provided they have special trade qualifications he said, but otherwise such men are rejected.

Tradesman Beats Moore

Final Swim Gala Borden Park Pool

Edmonton's final swim gala for the season at Borden Park on Saturday night included 14 city championship events in a total of 22.

Eugene Tradesman, East End, who defeated the hitherto unbeaten Don Moore, South Side, in the 100 yards freestyle, was the star of the evening. Moore, who had won the 100 yards freestyle in the 1941 season, was defeated by Tradesman in a close race. Tradesman's victory was a surprise to many, as Moore had been the favorite to win.

It was in the junior boys' 50 yards that Tradesman outstripped Moore and he did it in 5 seconds, but his margin was narrow. Roy Keen, East End was third.

Marie Lee came through with her best time in the 100 yards for girls 11 and under, with Doris Elliott, North Side, coming in second. Marie Lee was the favorite to win, but Elliott's performance was a surprise.

Elliott marked up her pair of wins in the 200 and 400, with Doris Shomaker in the runner-up position each time.

These three girls, all eligible for the 15 years and under class have great possibilities and are exceptionally fine swimmers according to Tommy Chivers' manager of the East End pool, who knows his swimming and who has had years of coaching and training to back his opinion up.

Thompson won the dumb diving cup, which was the special comic event in which over 20 participated. Bob Heron and Doreen Elliott took first place with Gordon Heron and Del Chivers copying second and Doreen Hollands and Jim Thompson being awarded third.

Officials were as follows: referees, Morrison, A. P. Methuen and L. Leck, judges, Mrs. G. Devlin, H. Myers and I. Stewart. Steve-

Hurricanes Lose 2-1

Moose Tie Up Softball Series by Beating Airmen

Moose squared the senior men's softball playoff series at on-call when they edged out Hurricanes 2-1 at Kingsway Park yesterday afternoon, pushing across the winning counter in the last half of the ninth.

Steve Devis had 10 strikeouts and walked a pair of batters while Phil Horne pitched for the Moose. Horne's performance was excellent, as he kept the Hurricanes' hitters off balance throughout the game.

George Andrews, champion batter of the league, tied the game in the eighth inning with a home run. Andrews' hit was a crucial moment in the game, as it kept the series tied.

Your Baby Try a Bracer-Upper And Mine On Late-Summer Menu

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDERED
Of course, it is quite natural for every mother to want to know whether her baby is as smart as she thinks he is, or if he is a mere baby. But the average baby, because she is certain to know him absolutely incomparable she can only measure his development and behavior against conduct of other babies to discover whether he is all she imagines him to be.

The year-old baby has definite ways of acting. He will have progressed beyond the babbling stage of language to the point of being able to use four or five words with meaning and great effect. That meaningless mama-mama has been boiled down to a curt Mama and doesn't sound him by running. Dada-dada is now condensed into Dada and if there is a grand-mother or aunt into the home "Nana" is often the name by which she is known to baby. Row-rows and kites and cars pronounced "ka"—all creep into the baby's vocabulary quickly. Words depend largely on baby's need for and the family's frequent use of them.

He will be able to creep without question, and he may be able to stand alone and get around his own feet. Some babies walk well at 10 months, some not until 15 or 16. To walk at any time between these ages is considered to be normal.

At one year he will recognize relatives and friends, in fact he may have a disposition to be afraid of the sight of strangers and cling to those who are familiar. Once he has passed the advance of a baby, he will listen to his watch, with fingers in his pockets. When put on the floor he may be a helpless crawler, with almost any playing which comes and can be put to rest again. All sorts of things of which fits into another, make good toys for this little one.

He will weigh from 18 to 26 pounds, measure 27 to 30 inches and possess, no doubt, of his teeth, four above and two below. His head habits may or may not be predictable but it is certain his bladder training will have to await the better control which comes with greater age.

His diet should be generous and varied: meat, milk, eggs, cheese, fruits and vegetables, corn, puddings and cereals, cereal and other breadstuffs and some form of vitamin D.

All in all, this year has been a magical one, for only his baby has emerged from a helpless, uninteresting, unloving infant into a walking and talking doll, but he has acquired something that is distinctive to his own personality. Your baby may be as smart or smarter than the average but he will be different, utterly different, from any other child of his age.

Our leaflet, "Diet and Daily Schedule" contains menus for the child from one to two years. It may be had by sending a recent stamped self-addressed envelope in care of this newspaper.

For a deluxe dinner—but that doesn't mean extravagant—try the appetizing dish above. It's a slice of ham, in which is placed a breast of chicken topped with mushrooms.

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
We need an occasional party these days of our family to brace the morale of our family and community. With care and skill, you can serve this delectable dish without any extravagance.

BREAST OF CHICKEN WITH HAM DE LUXE
Use 4½ lb. chickens. Each will give two breasts. Use 1 slice ham for each serving. Boil the breast in butter until tender. Remove the breast from a broiled chicken. Boil the ham in water until tender. Place ham slice on hot dinner plate. Place breast of chicken on top. Cover chicken with a slice of ham. Place a slice of ham on top of the chicken. Serve with green beans cut lengthwise in this strips and garnish with crisp watercress.

Here's a recipe to use the remaining chicken.

BAKED CHICKEN TURNOVER
Two cups boiled chicken diced. 1-1½ cups heavy cream made with thick cream, salt and pepper to taste, rich pastry recipe. Heat diced chicken in cream sauce, season and stand to cool and congeal. Roll out pastry to 1 inch thick and cut rounds with a large cutter. Place 1½ tablespoons of chicken filling in about 1 cup in center of each round. Brush the edges of the pastry with milk, shape into half moons. Bake the turnovers in hot oven (400 deg. F.) until brown.

—By DOROTHY DIX— Husbands and Wives Should Tell Truth

We Are Still Very Far Away From Matrimonial Millennium: Honesty and Frankness Best Guarantee For Happiness

The matrimonial millennium to which all hopeful brides and bridegrooms look forward will arrive when.

Boys and girls use their brains as well as their eyes in selecting their mates and take the trouble to find out before marriage whether they are getting what they want, instead of waiting to discover after a marriage that they guessed wrong.

When husbands and wives take each other "as is" and make the best of their bargains, instead of trying to cut each other according to their own little perfections and paper patterns. As long as a husband and wife flatter each other and make a home out of it, when he begins finding fault with her cooking and making fun of her hair and she commences criticizing his grammar and his table manners, it is down for keeps.

When men and women cease to have a child-like faith in the old superstition that there is some conjure in the marriage ceremony that will turn a neurotic into a go-getter, and make a feminine clothes-horse prefer basement brawls to little domestic squabbles, and realize that what people are before marriage they are after marriage, only more so.

When brides learn how to cook and run a budget and stop depending on their future husbands for everything, and instead of finding their unfortunate bridegrooms chronic dyspepsia and indigestion, and instead of the garbage can while they are acquiring the art of preparing edible food and ditching their parents.

COURTESY IS REQUIRED
When husbands and wives treat each other as equals, and not as lords and ladies, and when they are as they show to strangers, and wives take as much trouble to do for their husbands' eyes as they do for a dinner guest, and husbands make as much effort to tell themselves to their wives as they would to a guest.

When the family argument is taboo and husbands and wives walk wide and laughing around the subjects on which they disagree instead of dragging them out on the carpet and fighting them out like two over a bone, thereby causing the peace of the home and their nerves and dispositions.

When husbands and wives will be able to tell each other the truth and deal with each other with honesty and frankness, instead of the husband having to lie about having had to stay down town at night because of a headache, or really playing poker with boys, and the wife having to tell that her new hat is a little better than the one she picked up for $5 when she actually paid $20 for it.

When husbands and wives will cease to consider themselves martyrs because their mates are not angels, but will reflect that they themselves are pretty hard to live with and that inasmuch as they have their peculiarities and little ways it is nothing but good sportsmanship for them to turn a blind eye on the horizon of their arrival.

McCoy Health Service

The majority of cases of epilepsy are caused by a definite intestinal toxemia. The toxins which are absorbed as soon as you are found to keep the colon clean and healthy. If the patient is to secure permanent relief, it is necessary to turn the large intestine into a condition of normal functioning. As a general rule it is necessary to correct poisons or finks in the intestine where putrefaction is encouraged. Certainly, when the intestine is helped to do its work in a normal manner, the attacks are at once relieved and tend to become more curable. The most successful treatment of that which causes epilepsy is the large intestine clean and afterward developing a healthy condition of this organ so that no further trouble develops.

The diet to be followed after the fast should provide an abundance of fresh fruits and vegetables, together with a reasonable amount of meat. Starches and sugars are to be omitted for some time and after being returned to normal diet, it is to be used in moderation.

Manipulative treatment of the intestine is of marked value if correctly given and aids in restoring the colon to normal functioning. In every case it is advisable to take x-ray pictures before giving the treatment, inasmuch as a protracted, knicked, or pinched intestine requires special manipulative treatment. In many cases, the use of the Morse Wave or the sinusoidal current is of value.

In addition, the patient is to secure enough exercise. I find that the attacks are lessened when sufficient muscular exercise is taken each day to induce a healthy tired feeling. Exercises which strengthen the abdominal muscles are beneficial; the same is true of walking, which will be glad to send any one who desires it additional information on epilepsy. A special two-page article is available which will answer many of the most common questions of the patient on the material on epilepsy, simply write to McCoy Health Service in care of this newspaper and enclose ten cents and one large, self-addressed envelope. We will send you an answer, in all cases where this is possible without making an examination.

All questions regarding Health and Diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side only. Do not exceed 150 words. Address McCoy Health Service, 151 West 8th St., Los Angeles, Calif.

McKenney On Bridge

America's Card Authority

Seldom does one of the United States contract bridge champion titles go to another country. However, this year the national men's pair championship was won by Robert von Engel, a former Austrian born who applied for U.S. citizenship three years ago and, a citizen Goodman of Montreal, Canada.

Here is a demonstration of von Engel's play of the precision with which he counts on his hand.

Through an order issued recently, from M.D. 13 headquarters, the "A" district depot here is absorbed into the main military district set-up. The Edmonton establishment now becomes the Edmonton wing of No. 13 district depot, with the adjutant located at Calgary.

Lt-Col. Alan Elliott continues as officer in command of the Edmonton wing.

Maj. Edwards, whose home was in Calgary before the war, became adjutant of the Calgary Highlanders Regimental depot soon after the outbreak of hostilities in September, 1939. Then in June of 1940 when regimental depots were absorbed by the district depots he came to Edmonton as adjutant.

possible to build up a big reserve fleet any time it is required, and really intensive air attacks can be expected in the fall.

The Battle of the Solomon Islands has developed into a struggle for naval and air domination over the whole Southwest Pacific area. It may be many days before the battle is broken off. When that day comes the victor will be master of all the territory north and east of Australia. Present indications are moderately encouraging, particularly as regards air power. It may be that American naval losses will be almost as heavy as those of Japan, but if Japanese aircraft can be driven out of the sky and the ratio of losses continues to weigh in

The identification of whether the Russian offensive is a "straw man" or a "real man" will be put out of service by the exhaustion of the enemy's strength in the Leningrad sector and at Voronezh in the Southern Front. The pressure on Stalingrad, Russian troops' capture of the city on Thursday would wear down the enemy's man-power in the Leningrad sector. The Russian plan to capture the city in the Leningrad zone is probably the main reason for the German's exhaustion of a great deal of his man-power and used up much of his armor and fuel in the Leningrad battle.

When a Girl Marries

By RENE RYERSON MART

CHAPTER XI

It was 11 when Endi awoke the next morning. She awoke a very face at the bedside clock and wondered how she would ever manage to wake at 7 when she had to go back to work.

But she didn't have to worry about that yet. The air of the apartment was heavy with heat, and she lay listless until hunger forced her up to eat.

Then she dressed, gathered together her sketching materials, and headed for the Bath Club. There was no difficulty about her getting in; Hank had arranged for that the night before.

The locker woman gave her a check and assigned her to a dressing booth. Endi changed into her bathing suit, put her clothes in the locker and went out to the pool.

The place seemed different somehow in the daylight. Big brown leather guards occupied high chairs. Groups of women sat at tables under gay beach umbrellas playing bridge, boys and girls of high school age were dancing on the shuffle-board court to the music of a juke box. No one paid any attention to Endi. She felt shy and out of place.

She put her sketch book and crayon box down in a chair and walked over to the edge of the pool. She lifted her arms and jumped in, baring her teeth, as Hank had taught her to do the night before. But it wasn't fun like it had been last night with him. After a couple of jumps she gave up.

She dried herself and moved out of the sun and began to sketch a swimmer in the water. But her attention was soon distracted by a red-headed girl in a white bathing suit, who had just joined the group and was the nearest umbrella. Endi couldn't help staring at her.

For the first time she realized what the phrase, "perfect beauty," meant.

Endi had never seen anyone as beautiful as this girl. Wide-spaced eyes of an incredible blue, hair the color of a rose, nose with a slight smile, and skin that was unbelievable. Not the pink and white complexion of most red-heads, but waxy and creamy as the petals of a gardenia.

Endi was fascinated with surreptitious glances she began to sketch the girl, oblivious of an audience to her activity until some one called out from behind her.

"Oh, Clare. She's sketching you."

The red-headed girl stopped abruptly in something she was saying, got up with quick insolent grace, and moved over the grass toward Endi.

Endi smiled nervously up at her. "I hope you don't mind."

"Let me see it," the other girl demanded.

She studied the sketch arrogantly and from a frown a smile came to her forehead.

"My nose doesn't turn up like that," she said coldly.

"Oh, yes it does," the girl who had called to her insisted.

"I think you have a beautiful nose," Endi interposed.

The girl called Clare, stared at Endi. The level blue eyes like ice. Her manner said plainly, "Who are you to have an opinion of my nose?"

Contentiously she dropped the sketch, and without a word turned on her heel and went back to her friends under the sun shade.

Flushing, Endi bent over and retrieved the sketch, but she didn't finish it. The enthusiasm needed for satisfactory work was gone. She packed her tools away and went and dressed. She wouldn't go back to the pool, she thought.

Her heart turned to anger as she walked home. She had a strong impulse to tear the sketch up and throw it away. But when she took it out and looked at it something else she had challenged the artist in her. She found herself enchanted again by the clever contour of the face and the innocent pose of the head.

She wondered if she could finish it from memory. She sat down at her easel and began to work. So absorbed was she in her effort, that she jumped nervously when the door bell rang. Impatiently she went to answer it.

Hank Holliday grinned at her.

"Hello, busy tonight I've been called to a little country town for a consultation. It's a nice ride, I thought maybe you'd like to go along."

Endi's spirits rose like a lighthouse beam in the sun. "Of course," she said.

Hank had caught sight of the sketch on the easel. He walked toward it curiously. "When did you do this?" he demanded in a surprised tone.

"Today. At the pool. Do you know the girl I called her Clare?"

"Yes," he laughed shortly. "It's Clare Adams. Mother's picked her for my second wife."

In the silence that followed Hank Holliday's casual announcement, Endi's world crashed around her. She was surprised that Hank couldn't hear the piece falling.

"She's very beautiful," he conceded carelessly. He glanced at his watch. "Can you be ready in about 20 minutes?"

"So that's why he said he shouldn't have kissed me," Endi thought drearily as she dressed. They didn't talk much on the way. Traffic was heavy and the Doctor concentrated on his driving.

Only once he turned to her. "What's the matter—your so quiet?"

She smiled thinly. "It's the heat, I guess."

He circled the square in the center of the quiet little town and parked before the square brick building that bore above its door the inscription, "General Hospital."

"I won't be long," he promised, getting out of the car. And then, he went to a place to eat.

Endi, in her own unhappy thoughts, Endi couldn't have told whether Hank had been gone a half hour or three when he came back and swung into the seat beside her.

His mind was still absorbed in the case he had just seen. "A 10-year-old boy," he explained. "Tall out of a basket a month ago and broke his leg. And it isn't healing. I think malnutrition is back of it."

He backed the car out from the curb, and then went on violently as if arguing it with some one. "It's criminal, ignore. These farm people have lost the essentials of healthy diet at home, milk, eggs, fresh vegetables and meat."

Endi was too crushed with her secret disappointment to take any real interest in what he was saying. She made a lame effort to respond. "Do you specialize in diet?"

"No," Hank said shortly. "I'm a home surgeon. But diet enters into it. You can't get home to nurse if there aren't home building materials in the patient's bed."

It must be fascinating," he gave a grunt of disgust. "It isn't fascinating. No kind of doctoring is fascinating, and certainly surgery isn't. It's hard work, dirty, and nauseating. But it's more interesting than anything else on earth, mending broken bodies. And it makes you feel as if you were of some use in the world."

Endi colored under the rebuff. "It was a stupid thing to say," she amended humbly. "I had some thing else on my mind. Perhaps it was the eagerness of a voice that focused his attention."

He gave her a keen glance. "Something is bothering you, you're not a bit like yourself tonight. Would it help to tell me about it?"

"No," she said quickly. "No."

They ate in the one and only restaurant the town afforded. The menu was limited and their steaks when they finally came were fitted to the consistency of old leather.

That she told herself, "was your chance to show him that you were interested in his work. That you were something more than a pretty doll like Clare Adams, that you had intelligence and understanding." And because she had been wrapped in self-pity she had muffled her cheeks with a napkin.

For he refused to talk about his work again. Deliberately he turned the conversation to other things.

(To Be Continued)

THERE ARE NO ANIMALS THAT CAN REASON

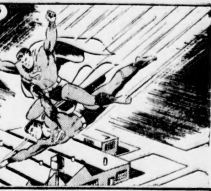

Many stories have been current about animals that use intelligence and reasoning in solving problems and rescuing individuals, but no one has ever yet proved that any living being other than man is able to reason. Physiologists explain the apparent lack of reasoning as "conditioning" and habit formation, along with natural instincts. Many animals show remarkable responses in unusual situations, but it has never been proved that they can reason.
